The members of the AISC Safety Committee are pleased to announce that your company has won an AISC Safety Award. This award is given for your record of hours worked with minimal Days Away and Restricted Time injuries in 2017! As an award winner you are a member who understands the value of safety and what it takes to achieve that successful record.

The value of this award is that it acknowledges the efforts, large and small, your company has made to operate in a safe and efficient way. We encourage you to make the award more valuable to your company by using it. You can announce it to your employees, making it a part of your effort to create a culture of safety in your company. You can post it in a prominent place where visitors and customers will see it and know you are managing an important part of your company's goals. You can cite the award in bids and solicitations to contractors who know the importance of safety and what it indicates about a well-run company and its values. You can also put the Safety Award logo on your company letterhead and website to promote your successful safety record. You may obtain the logo by emailing safety@aisc.org.

A banner sign with a list of safety award winning firms will be displayed near the entrance to the exhibit hall at the NASCC: The Steel Conference (April 11-13 in Baltimore, MD), where your peers can see it. We will also publish an article in Modern Steel Construction magazine with a link to the list of winning companies.

If you attend the NASCC in Baltimore this year please remember to attach a ribbon to your name tag identifying you as a Safety Award winner and join other safety oriented fabricators and erectors at session O1, "The First Trump Year-The effect of the Administration on Industry Labor", Friday at 1:45 p.m. where Mr. Ed Foulke of Fisher Phillips and former head of OSHA will discuss directions the Department of Labor is taking. For more detailed conference information please visit www.aisc.org/nascc.

Thank you for participating in the safety award program. The members of the AISC Safety Committee wish you another safe year in 2018.
